Caspian Sea Monster - Wikipedia The Caspian Sea Monster, officially КМ (Korabl Maket, Russian - Корабль-макет, Experimental Craft),[1] also known as the "Kaspian Monster", was an experimental ground effect vehicle (or ekranoplan) a craft that flies, but stays close to the surface so it can rely on the ground effect. Caspian Sea Monster Ekranoplan Flight Video These craft were originally developed by the Soviet Union as very high-speed military transports, and were based mostly on the shores of the Caspian Sea. In search of the Caspian Sea Monster the Register The Russians had a rather more prosaic name for the Caspian Sea Monster: the KM or "korabl-maket". This "ship-prototype" was the first in a series of Soviet "ekranoplan" ("screen plane") developments and was designed by Rostislav Evgenievich Alexeev of the Central Hydrofoil Design Bureau.
